

Dear FCC Commissioners,

Deregulation of the media industry does not serve the interests of a democracy. Diversity of perspective is what makes the United States the great country that it is; by fostering a monoculture of broadcasting, one also fails to promote independent thought, and free speech. The FCC, as a government agency, should keep the interests of the public good in mind when making policy. Through the proposed deregulation, the public good will be squandered, and the quality of our rights and freedoms will be deteriorated.

Sincerely,

Rachel Cardone
